

Table of Contents

List of Illustrations

Acknowledgements

Foreword by Michael Hollington

Introduction by Francesca Orestano and Norbert Lennartz

Part I

Dickens and Critical Theory

1.1 The Dickens World, a World of Objects

Maria Teresa Chialant

1.2 What Dickens (and His Readers) Knew: An Experiment in Knowledge Criticism

Alessandro Vescovi

1.3 The Neo-Dickensian Novel: Contemporary Fiction
Writing and Dickens Criticism

Georges Letissier

Part II

Dickens and Gender

2.1 Dickens as a Modern Romantic: The Case of Edith Dombey in Dombey and Son

Norbert Lennartz

2.2 Male Bonding in Dickens's David Copperfield and Great Expectations
Adina Ciugureanu

2.3 Double Narration and Intersubjective Ethics in Bleak House
Renate Brosch

2.4 Weak, Sexless, One-dimensional, Boring? Reading
Amy Dorrit
Angelika Zirker

Part III

Dickens and Visual Culture

3.1 Dickens's Sketches and Visual Culture: from Boz to the Cinema
Claudia Cremonesi

3.2 The Lady at her Toilette, Vanity and Death and the Maiden: a Reinterpretation of the Character of Miss Havisham in Great Expectations
Nathalie Vanfasse

3.3 Dickens's Uncommercial Traveller as a Flâneur
Wolfgang G. Müller and Isabel Vila Cabanes

Part IV

Dickens's Ecology

4.1 Dombey and Son and the Representation of Children's Impairments
Mauro Spicci and Michele Augusto Riva

4.2 Dickens's Animals through the Lenses of Poverty
Studies and Posthumanism
Greta Olson

4.3 The Mystery of Edwin Drood and the Decomposition of Forms
Saverio Tomaiuolo

Part V

Christmas, Toys and Childhood

5.1 Charles Dickens's A Christmas Carol: The Triumph of Celebration
Aleksandra Kędzierska

5.2 "All toys at first, I find": Theorising the Material
Culture of Childhood in "A Christmas Tree"
Hannah Field

5.3 Dickens's Vocal Quartet in Holiday Romance and E.
Nesbit's Treasure Seekers: Notes on Post-Victorian Children's Literature
Francesca Orestano

Contributors

Index