

About the Authors	vii
Foreword by Cary L. Cooper	ix
Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xiii
1 The New Work	1
The new inequality	4
New markets and new structures	7
The new work life	13
What is so new about “The New Work”?	16
The new and the old work	18
The purpose and structure of this book	22
2 The New Rules of Work: On Flexible Work and How to Manage It	25
Flexible work	29
Flexibility through empowerment	35
Flexibility through substitution	48
Separate paths?	60
3 The New Work Life and the Dimensions of Knowledge	69
The cognitive knowledge demands	71
The social knowledge demands	81
The societal knowledge demands	97
The existential knowledge demands	107
Some concluding considerations	120
4 The Place of Work in Life	123
Separate spheres	126
Competing spheres	129
Coping with boundaries	130

	Mutually favored spheres	133
	New conditions outside work life: the consumption society	134
	The moral supermarket	138
	The market aesthetic	141
	The new family	144
	Organizing living	149
	Conflict and balance in life	158
	An individual matter	162
5	Work Life, Stress, and the New Ill Health	163
	Stress as a social problem and research area	167
	Stress models for the work life	172
	The new work life as a source of stress	189
	The new ill health	205
	The new ill health, work environment, and the possibility space of work	212
6	Some Concluding Comments and Reflections	217
	The deregulation of working life	218
	The individualization of working life	219
	The heterogenization of working life	220
	The new inequality	221
	New strains and symptoms	222
	Flexibility and power in times of economic recession	223
	Future – trust or new forms and fields for external regulation?	225
	References	229
	Index	253