

Table of Contents

Preface and Acknowledgements	xi
Foreword	xiii
Introduction	1
I.1. Objective of This Study	1
I.2. EU Energy Law: Differences in Natural Gas and Electricity	3
I.3. Key Definitions	6
I.4. Structure	7
Chapter 1
EU Natural Gas Markets and Long-Term Contracting: An Overview of Economic and Political Aspects	9
1.1. Natural Gas Supply to EU: Contractual and Political Factors	9
1.2. Long-Term Contracts in Natural Gas Markets	10
1.2.1. Long-Term Take-or-Pay Contracts in Europe	11
1.2.2. Current Market Imperfections	15
1.3. Legal Relations with Key Natural Gas-Supplying Countries	17
1.3.1. Russia	18
1.3.1.1. Bilateral Cooperation	20
1.3.1.2. The Energy Charter Treaty	23
1.3.2. Algeria	25
1.3.3. Norway	27
1.3.4. Caspian Region	28
1.4. Concluding Remarks	31

Chapter 2
Security of Supply in the European Union	33
2.1. Introduction	33
2.2. EU Energy Security Discussion in the New Millennium	34
2.3. Energy Security in the Context of EU Energy Policy Objectives	36
2.3.1. Competitiveness and Security of Supply	37
2.3.2. Sustainability and Security of Supply	40
2.4. Elements of Security of Supply	41
2.5. Definitions of Security of Supply	45
2.6. Security of Supply in the Case Law of the ECJ	51
2.7. Threats to the EU Security of Supply	60
2.7.1. External Security of Supply: Insecurity of Gas Sources	60
2.7.1.1. Reserve Depletion	60
2.7.1.2. Investment in Gas Fields	63
2.7.1.3. Insufficient Diversification	64
2.7.2. Internal Security of Supply: Sufficient Investment	65
2.8. Concluding Remarks	69
Chapter 3
Key EU Gas Market Regulation Relating to Long-Term Contracting	71
3.1. Introduction	72
3.2. Relationship between General Competition Laws and Sector-Specific Energy Regulation	73
3.2.1. The Relationship: Possible Approaches	74
3.2.2. The Case Law	78
3.2.3. Application of the Two Regimes	81
3.3. Third-Party Access to Gas Pipelines: The General Regulatory Regime	83
3.3.1. Regulatory Framework for TPA	85
3.3.1.1. TPA in the Natural Gas Market Directives: From Negotiation to Regulation	87
3.3.1.2. The Access Regulation	90
3.3.1.2.1. Regulated Tariffs	92
3.3.1.2.2. Principles of Capacity Allocation Mechanisms and Congestion Management Procedures	93
3.3.1.3. Continuing Relevance of Article 32(1)	95
3.3.2. Access Regimes and Merchant Infrastructure	102
3.3.2.1. An Overview of the Conditions	103
3.4. Unbundling	112
3.4.1. Introduction	112
3.4.2. Status Quo: From Account Unbundling to Legal Unbundling and Beyond	113
3.4.3. Unbundling in the Third Legislative Package	115
3.4.4. The Third Country Clause	118

3.5. Long-Term Commodity Contracts and Sector-Specific Regulation	119
3.5.1. Take-or-Pay Agreements	120
3.6. Concluding Remarks	123
Chapter 4
The Application of EU Competition Law in Natural Gas Markets: Background and Developments	125
4.1. Introduction	126
4.2. An Introduction to the Law and Economics of Vertical Restraints	127
4.2.1. Why Are Certain Vertical Restraints Prohibited While Others Are Permitted?	129
4.2.1.1. Negative Effects of Vertical Agreements	130
4.2.1.2. Positive Effects of Vertical Agreements	131
4.3. The Application of EU Law to Vertical Agreements	132
4.4. Article 102 TFEU: Some General Remarks	134
4.4.1. Establishing Dominance	135
4.4.2. Abuse of Dominant Position	136
4.5. Defining EU Natural Gas Markets under EU Competition Law	140
4.5.1. Relevant Product Markets	141
4.5.1.1. Upstream Markets	142
4.5.1.2. Downstream Markets	143
4.5.1.2.1. Infrastructure Markets	143
4.5.1.2.2. Sales	144
4.5.2. The Relevant Geographical Market	145
4.6. Previous Competition Law Enforcement in the Energy Sector	146
4.6.1. Introduction	147
4.6.2. The Early Case Law	148
4.6.3. The Case Law of the New Millennium	150
4.6.4. Long-Term Supply Contracts and Downstream Natural Gas Markets	150
4.6.4.1. The Cases	151
4.6.4.2. Long-Term Downstream Contracts: Volume, Duration and More	153
4.6.5. Destination Clauses: First Crack at the Upstream Supply Contracts	159
4.6.5.1. Commission Practice	160
4.6.5.1.1. Gazprom/ENI	161
4.6.5.1.2. GDF/ENI – GDF/ENEL	162
4.6.5.1.3. Sonatrach	163
4.6.5.2. Approach in Sonatrach v. Approach in GDF/ENI/ENEL	164
4.6.5.3. Commission Practice: The Destination Clause Saga and the E.ON/Ruhrigas Case	166
4.6.6. Ownership Unbundling through Competition Law	167
4.7. Concluding Remarks	175

Chapter 5
Compatibility of Vertical Natural Gas Transportation Capacity, Commodity Contracts and EU Competition Law	177
5.1. Long-Term Upstream Natural Gas Commodity Contracts	178
5.1.1. Introduction	178
5.1.2. Long-Term Contracts: Views from the Market Players	179
5.1.3. The Effect of Long-Term Contracts on EU Energy Markets	184
5.1.4. The Alternative Solution	189
5.1.5. The Evolving Nature of EU Energy Markets	197
5.2. Long-Term Natural Gas Transportation Capacity and EU Competition Law	199
5.2.1. Refusal to Deal: An Introduction	201
5.2.2. The Essential Facility Doctrine: General Considerations	204
5.2.3. Refusal to Deal: Access to Natural Gas Pipelines	207
5.2.3.1. An Overview of the Case Law	207
5.2.3.2. The Essential Facilities Doctrine and Access to Pipelines	210
5.2.3.3. Construction under Special Rights and TPA-Friendly Interpretation of Article 102 TFEU	214
5.2.4. Concluding Remarks on Article 102(b) TFEU and Essential Facilities	217
5.3. Discrimination in the Context of Article 102 TFEU	219
5.3.1. Case C-17/03, VEMW and Others	221
5.3.1.1. The Facts of the Case	221
5.3.1.2. Main Arguments Presented to ECJ	223
5.3.1.3. The Advocate General's Opinion	223
5.3.1.4. The ECJ's Judgment	224
5.3.2. Interpretation of the Judgment	226
5.3.3. Concluding Remarks on Article 102(c) TFEU	229
5.4. Concluding Remarks	229
Chapter 6
Security of Supply as Objective Justification	233
6.1. Introduction	233
6.2. Article 101 TFEU and the Rule of Reason Doctrine	234
6.3. Non-economic Gains in EU Competition Law: Articles 101(3) and '102(3)' TFEU	240
6.4. The Security of Supply Argument under Article 101(3) TFEU	245
6.4.1. Security of Supply as a Quantifiable Economic Benefit	247
6.4.2. Security of Supply as a Non-economic or Non-quantifiable Benefit	250
6.4.2.1. Non-economic Gains in EU Competition Law: Environmental Benefits as the Example	250

6.4.2.2. Security of Supply: Non-economic Gains and the Problem of Counterfactual – The Case Law	258
6.4.3. How Should Security of Supply Be Considered under Article 101(3) TFEU? What is the Right Policy Choice?	261
6.5. Brief Remarks on Long-Term Capacity Contracts and the Security of Supply Argument under Article 101(3) TFEU	263
6.6. Concluding Remarks	266
Conclusions	269
Bibliography	279
Index	311