

Preface and Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	1
1: Imagining National Space: Symbolic Landscapes and National Canons	11
2: Articulating Urban Space: Spatial Politics and Difference	49
3: “The Inadequacy of Symbolic Surfaces”: Urban Space, Art, and Corporeality in Siri Hustvedt’s What I Loved	73
4: Rewriting the Melting Pot: Paule Marshall’s Brownstone City in The Fisher King	123
5: Specular Images: Sub/Urban Spaces and “Echoes of Art” in Carol Shields’s Unless	169
6: “The End of Traceable Beginnings”: Poetics of Urban Longing and Belonging in Dionne Brand’s What We All Long For	215
7: Synthesis	264
Bibliography	279
Index	307