Contents

Acknowledgements
Foreword by Professor Yakin Er tü rk

Introduction: framing forced marriage as a form of violence against women
Aisha K. Gill and Sundari Anirutha

1 Understanding forced marriage: definitions and realities
Geetaanjali Gangoli, Khattidja Chantler, Marianne Hester and Ann Singleton

2 Reconceptualising consent and coercion within an intersectional understanding of forced marriage
Sundari Aniruth and Aisha K. Gill

Shazia Choudhry

4 Border control to prevent forced marriages: choosing between protecting women and protecting the nation
Aunja Bredal

5 The social construction of forced marriage and its 'victim' in media coverage and crime policy discourses
Sundari Aniruth and Aisha K. Gill
Part 2: Policy and practice

6 Forced marriage legislation in the UK: a critique
Aisha K. Gill and Sujata Anitha

7 The law, the courts and their effectiveness
Teertha Gupta and Khattri Sapnu

8 The practice of law making and the problem of forced marriage: what is the role of the Muslim Arbitration Tribunal?
Samia Bano

9 Constructing victims, construing credibility: forced marriage, Pakistani women and the UK asylum process
Marzia Balzani

10 ‘Wayward girls and well-wisher parents’: habeas corpus, women’s rights to personal liberty, consent to marriage and the Bangladeshi courts
Sara Hossain

About the contributors

Index

Acknowledgements

Various people have helped us, in different ways, together. While it is not possible to thank everyone, we would like to single out a number of people who have provided logistical support. We both wish to thank them for their help, support and attention to detail. Lamé O’Riordan, Senior Commissioner for providing the platform that allowed this book to be published as a single volume. This book would not have been possible without the support of all the contributors: we offer thanks for their readiness to work to the project.

I am incredibly blessed to have so many people in my life. I have been extremely fortunate to receive so much support from so many sources during the evolution of this book and I couldn’t have done it without your encouragement, support, insight and advice. And I couldn’t have done it without you. Thanks are due to the many friends and colleagues who read the book and provided valuable ideas: I would like to thank Deepali Shah, Paminder Parbha-Bal, Alexia Georgiou, and Thais. I would also like to thank Rowena Jones for their friendship, their assistance in research and their brilliant cover design for the book. I would like to thank the courageous women who have shared their experiences with marriage with me over the years: your courage...