

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
1 Introduction: Rhetoric and Reality	1
The illusion of progress?	3
Libya 2011 and R2P	12
Structure and overview	20
Part I The Responsibility to Protect: Sound and Fury ... ?
2 The Evolution of the Responsibility to Protect	29
‘Acts of genocide’: Rwanda 1994	30
‘How should we respond?’ Kosovo 1999	34
The International Commission on Intervention and State Sovereignty	40
The 2005 World Summit	45
The 2009 General Assembly debate	50
Conclusion: ‘what is R2P?’	54
3 The Responsibility to Protect, Authority and International Law	57
The legal status of humanitarian intervention pre-R2P	58
The internal responsibility to protect	69
The international responsibility to protect	75
Conclusion: ‘in short, it is nothing new’	82
4 The Responsibility to Prevent: The Last Refuge of the Unimaginative?	87
The responsibility to prevent	89
The Office of the Special Adviser on the Prevention of Genocide	92
The last refuge of the unimaginative?	103
Conclusion: ‘brief and unoriginal?’	116

5	Political Will and Non-Intervention	119
	The centrality of political will	120
	The false promise of benevolent internationalism	127
	The moral defence of non-intervention	135
	Conclusion: ' plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose '	144

Part II Beyond R2P

6	In Defence of Humanitarian Intervention and the Potential of International Law	149
	In defence of humanitarian intervention	150
	The degradation of international law ... and humanity	158
	The potential of international law	164
	Conclusion: 'elementary situations'	177
7	Understanding the Tension between Sovereignty and Intervention	180
	The sovereignty myth	181
	Relative sovereignty	191
	Understanding the developing world's concerns	198
	Conclusion: 'a judicial climate change?'	206
8	Grasping the Nettle: The Parameters of Viable Reform	209
	The Security Council and national interest	211
	A new direction	228
	The advantages of institutional reform	236
	Conclusion: 'progress rather than perfection'	250
9	Conclusion: The Future of Humanitarian Intervention?	255
	Rhetoric and reality	257
	'The children of light'	260
	The future of humanitarian intervention?	264
	Conclusion: the reform imperative	267

Bibliography	269
---------------------	-----

Index	295
--------------	-----