Contents

1 Localizing Transitional Justice: Civil Society Practices and Initiatives in the Balkans .............................................. 1
Zala Volčić and Olivera Simić

Part I Initiatives Within the Nation States

2 Civil Society and Post-communist Transitional Justice in Romania ................................................................. 17
Lavinia Stan

3 Dealing with the Past in Post-war Croatia: Perceptions, Problems, and Perspectives ........................................... 33
Tamara Banjeglav

4 The Failure of Macedonian Post-communist Transitional Justice: Lustration, Between Cleansing and Parody ............. 51
Despina Angelovska

5 How Activists See Civil Society and the Political Elite in Bosnia: Relevance to Prospects of Transitional Justice ......... 69
Eunice Castro Seixas

6 The “Transitional Citizen”: Civil Society, Political Agency and Hopes for Transitional Justice in Bosnia–Herzegovina .......... 87
Briony Jones, Alex Jeffrey, and Michaelina Jakala

7 Transitional Justice in Albania: Historical Burden, Weak Civil Society, and Conflicting Interests .......................... 105
Arolda Elbasani and Artur Lipinski

8 Truth in the Shadow of Justice ...................................................... 123
Jamie Rowen
Part II Transnational Civil Society Practices

9 Structured Encounters in Post-conflict/Post-Yugoslav Days: Visiting Belgrade and Prishtina .................................................. 143
Orli Fridman

10 What About the Women? Transitional Justice and Gender in Bosnia and Herzegovina and Northern Ireland ........................................... 163
Michael Potter and Hedley Abernethy

11 ‘Pillar of Shame’: Civil Society, UN Accountability and Genocide in Srebrenica ................................................................. 181
Olivera Simić

12 Afraid to Cry Wolf: Human Rights Activists’ Struggle of Transnational Accountability Efforts in the Balkans .............................. 201
Arnaud Kurze and Iva Vukusic

13 From International Courts to Grassroots Organizing: Obstacles to Transitional Justice in the Balkans .............................................. 217
Jill A. Irvine and Patrice C. McMahon

Index ............................................................................................................. 239

Contributors

Jamie Rowen is presently a PhD student at the University of Chicago, IL. She received her BA in Anthropology from the University of Texas at Austin and received her JD and MA in Gender Studies from the University of Michigan. She has conducted ethnographic analysis of transnational practices related to transitional justice in countries such as Bosnia and Herzegovina, Colombia, and Northern Ireland, and has published research on the impact of the truth commission on human rights protection in Latin America. She is currently working on a project on human rights in Costa Rica. Jamie's research explores human rights and international development, with a focus on transitional justice.

Eunice Castro Seixas lives in Porto, Portugal, and completed a Master in Social Psychology from the University of Porto. She is currently working on a project concerning the role of civil society in transitional justice in Herzegovina and in the Russian Federation. She has given presentations at scientific conferences and has published articles on the intersection of transitional justice and international development. Her research interests include discourse analysis and social justice.