

Contents

List of Abbreviations		ix
Introduction	Constitutional Theory and Political Philosophy	I
	The Problem	I
	Institutional Blindness of Political Theory—Lack of Theory in Constitutional Law	I
	The Model: Organization and Legitimacy	4
	State of the Discussion	8
	Claims and Methods: For a New Conceptualism in Comparative Constitutional Law	10
Chapter 1	Division of Powers: Traditions and Meanings	16
	I. The Traditional Division of Powers: A Comparative Sketch	16
	II. The Separation of Powers—Functions and Meanings of a Concept	40
	III. Some Interim Conclusions	49
Chapter 2	Self-determination as the Source of Separated Powers	51
	I. Self-determination as the Basic Concept of Legitimacy	51
	II. Self-determination Through Law	63
	III. The Three Powers: A Model from Legitimacy	80
	IV. Is There a Normative Hierarchy Among the Branches? The Rule of Continuous Concretization	106
	V. Some Conclusions	108
Chapter 3	Problems of Separated Powers in the Constitutional State	110
	I. Parliament and Government	110
	II. Constitutional Review	126
	III. Limits of Judicial Control of the Administration	142
	IV. Conclusion	148

Chapter 4	Separation of Powers Beyond the State	150
	I. Introduction: The Internationalization of Law, an Analysis from Legitimacy	150
	II. The Internationalized Constitutional State	159
	III. European Integration	167
	IV. International Law	195
Outlook	Governance—Constitutionalization—Fourth Branches?	227
	Informality	227
	Governance	229
	Constitutionalization	230
	The Diffusion of Accountability	231
	Freedom, Regime, and Fourth Power	232
Bibliography		233
Index		261